COLOR QUESTION TO BE DECIDED IN N. Y. COURT

Editor Briggs, Objecting To Being Called "White" Asks Court To Decide His Status.

Case Attracts A Deal Of Attention Throughout The Country. Garvey Initiates Plaintiff Is White.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—(Special)—A deal of interest has been manifested in the case now before the courts of this city where one editor is suing another on a charge of criminal libel on the ground that he had called the other a "white man."

This was the first case of this particular style ever brought before the court in this country where a man who with all his talents and purposes is colored, and objects to being called "white" because it hurts his business career.

Yet that is what Cyril Briggs, editor of the Messenger charged his suit against Marcus Garvey, the editor of the Negro World, who, Mr. Briggs says is in colored and Garvey says Briggs is a white man, posing for colored as a matter of convenience.

Inasmuch as those fellows can't agree who is right on Mr. Briggs' side, the court has been called upon to decide.

The case was heard here a few days ago and a decision is looked forward to with a deal of interest.

Below is a stenographic report of the case.

SAYS HAITIANS WERE EXECUTED WITHOUT TRIAL

Major T. C. Turner Of United States Marines Tells Of Many Atrocities During American Occupation.

Testifies That 2,500 Natives Were Killed. Forced Into Servitude Under Riles And Bombing Planes.

A. N. P. Staff Correspondent.
WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 2.—The mixed mass of charges and denials of atrocities of American Marines in Haiti in 1911 was reiterated at a hearing by the Senate committee, headed by Senator McCormick of Illinois last Wednesday.

The committee learned from Major T. C. Turner, United States Marine Corps that approximately 2,500 natives were killed in action during the occupation of American territory. The official records of the marine corps submitted on the committee by Turner to show that 1,352 natives were killed in action from October 1, 1918 to October 1, 1920.

Major Turner estimated that approximately 100 native Haitians were killed in Haiti during the occupation. He had investigated the reported execution. Nevertheless he expressed the opinion that "something like that" had occurred.

"You" he replied, "under the direction and command of a Valer."

"Yes," he said, "and you believe that his denial was made?"

Major Turner told the committee that a 2nd Battalion was used by the marine for scouting purposes and to drop bombs on rebellious natives. After a time however the natives refrained from gathering in groups of sufficient size to justify bombing and the form of warfare was abandoned.

The witness also stated that the process of forcing Haitians into involuntary servitude in road building gangs under the riles of the American soldiers began to be reported in newspaper results and had been stopped.

Captain Hooker's Report
The committee also received an affidavit of a copy of a report made by Captain Hooker, United States Marine Corps, in January, 1919. The report stated that the 2nd Battalion, United States Marine Corps, had several natives who attempted to escape from road work and that Lieutenant Valer had ordered six persons had been shot.

Captain Hooker's report was offered to support Maj. Turner's statement that the natives were forcibly held in servitude, working on the roads for months, and that conditions became so bad that an order was issued prohibiting forced labor.

The witness also stated that the process of forcing Haitians into involuntary servitude in road building gangs under the riles of the American soldiers began to be reported in newspaper results and had been stopped.
